Sickening video shows Dallas cops laughing and mocking mentally ill man as he loses consciousness while being restrained shortly before he is declared dead

- Tony Timpa called 911 in 2016 asking for help claiming he was schizophrenic, off his medication and had taken drugs
- Police arrived and restrained him in handcuffs and put him onto his torso
- An officer then placed his knee in his back and held him on the ground for 14 minutes until paramedics arrived
- In those 14 minutes, the cops laughed and joked as Timpa struggled to breathe
- When he stopped moving, they gave him a sedative and tried to jostle him around on the ground but kept his face planted in the grass
- By the time they lifted him into a gurney, he had stopped breathing
- Paramedics told the cops he was dead and they replied: 'Oh st. Fk'
- The three cops were indicted by a grand jury but prosecutors dropped the case
- Timpa's family is fighting in civil court to hold them responsible for his death

Sickening video footage has emerged of the moment a mentally ill man took his last breaths while being held down by Dallas cops after calling 911 for help.

Tony Timpa, 32, died in 2016 while being held on the ground by police officers in the street. He had called 911 and told the operator that he was not only on medication but had taken drugs and needed help.

He was calling from the parking lot of a porn store and also told cops that he was schizophrenic.

When police got to him, he had been put in plastic arm restraints by private security guards and was behaving erratically on the ground.

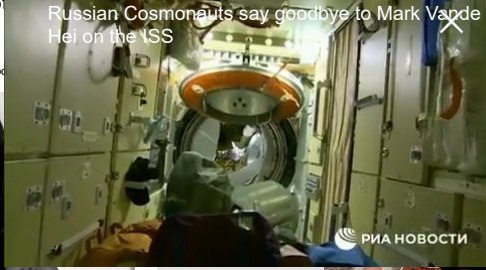

The cops then put him in traditional handcuffs and flipped him onto his front, placing a knee on his back, to try to 'calm him down'.

They then joked and laughed for six minutes, mimicking him and laughing about a 'cocktail' of sedatives he would receive in a mental health facility while he slowly lost consciousness.

'cocktail' of sedatives he would receive in a mental health facility as he lost consciousness

It shows how the paramedic who treated Timpa told the officers: 'He's dead' as one stood, claiming to have spoken to his mother.

'He's what?!' the officer replied. He then muttered: 'Fk!'

The officers - were charged with misdemeanors after Timpa's death.

The Dallas County Medical Examiner ruled the death a homicide and said he died of cardiac arrest caused by the toxic effects of cocaine and stress from physical restraint.

Despite the ruling, the officers were charged with misdemeanor deadly conduct.

The officers - Kevin Mansell, Danny Vasquez and Dustin Dillard - were charged with misdemeanor deadly conduct by a grand jury but prosecutors dismissed the case.

Now, Timpa's family is seeking a settlement in civil court.

The Dallas County Medical Examiner ruled Timpa's death a homicide and said he died of cardiac arrest caused by the toxic effects of cocaine and stress from physical restraint. The 32-year-old's family is fighting in civil court to hold the officers responsible for his death

The video shows that before he lost consciousness, Timpa yelled: 'You're gonna kill me! You're gonna kill me! You're gonna kill me!'

The cops laughed it off, told him to stay calm and giggled.

They then flipped him onto his torso, pushing his face into the grass, and one of the cops put his knee onto his back.

They laughed: 'What have you taken Tony?'

Once he had lost consciousness, they tried to wake him up by jostling at him and laughing: 'Wake up Tony, time to get up for school.'

A cop in the background then mimicked a child, replying: 'I don't wanna go to school.'

They then laughed about the 'cocktail' he might receive at a local mental health facility.

When they realized he was unresponsive, their tone became more serious but they kept him on the ground, holding him down.

An emergency worker then approached and gave him a sedative.

By the time they hoisted him onto a gurney, after 14 minutes on the ground, he was dead.

The officers began to panic, noticing that he was unresponsive.

'He's not breathing,' one of the paramedics said from the ambulance.

'He's not breathing? Oh sh*t! Fk!' the cop replied.

In the background, a different officer chimed in: 'I've got his mom on the phone and she knows all this stuff.'

The paramedic then pointed to him and said: 'He's dead.'
