Norman PD have acknowledged that an officer doxxed the city council member. But they say her address is "public information" & are refusing to even discipline the officer, much less fire him. They also claim that the rape victim suffered "minor injuries".

After breaking into her duplex, the rapist dug his elbow into the her neck, pushed her into the wall, & said, "Maybe next time you'll learn your lesson." Again, this is after a NORMAN POLICE OFFICER posted her home address publicly in the context of "teaching her a lesson."

Norman cop Michael Lauderback, using the account "Tired Ofthehate", doxxed the city council woman, threatening that protestors could "enlist all the help [they] want" but that they are "just adding to the numbers that will be in trouble like yourself." The rape was 2 days later.

In May, Norman PD also declined to press charges on a fellow cop in nearby Lexington, after he threatened Norman Mayor Brea Clark, saying she, "needs to be pulled out of office & tried on the court house lawn...the problem with politicians, they don't get hung in public anymore."

IMPORTANT UPDATE Far right activists are using

to raise $$$ to remove the Norman city council woman—who was the victim of police doxxing resulting in the rape of a woman mistaken as her—from office. They've raised $22k so far. Please report:
